As one of the first people to observe the heavens with a telescope, Galileo helped us know interesting wonders of modern science. He's actually called the father of modern science because of his discoveries in the areas of astronomy and physics.

Galileo Galilei, usually known by his first name, was born in Pisa, Italy, on 15 February 1564. His father, a musician, sent him to the University of Pisa to study medicine. Galileo was more interested in science, however. Against his father's wishes, he gave up medicine to study mathematics. For several years he taught mathematics in Florence and Siena.

In about 1609 Galileo learned of the invention of the telescope in the Netherlands. He decided to develop his own telescope and began to use it to observe the planets. Soon Galileo's telescope was used everywhere in Europe.

The telescope allowed Galileo to make a number of discoveries. On 7 January 1610, he discovered four moons orbiting around the planet Jupiter. He also saw the mountains on the moon for the first time.
